Six years after leaving behind his inheritance, Tyrell Sloan returns to familiar ground. In 1890, he was the heir to the estate of his Grandfather, John Henry Sloan Sr. consisting of 300 acres of red shale, forest, and pasture. Near the homestead, and less than an hour's ride up stream of the Hudu Creek, were three gold claims, the Sloan 1, 2 and 3. At the time of his departure, the claims were contracted for a two-year term with the Wake Up Jake, a mining company. When he left, he wrote a letter that he stashed in the sacks of gold put in Grandma Heddy's care. Tyrell bequeathed the gold to Grandma, and his share of whatever the Wake Up Jake produced during the term of the contract. To Marissa, he left the homestead, all 300 acres. With plans to head north to his hometown of Hell's Bottom, he was side tracked. A recurring dream of his Grandfather's death and the men who killed him, as well as the face-to-face encounter with the villainous men of his dream, took over the next six years of his life. With the possibility of being captured and hanged, Tyrell returns to Red Rock Canyon to live his life in obscurity. To his surprise, Marissa, his onetime true love continues to reside there. It isn't long before the two are once more reacquainted, and their adventure begins as Tyrell tries to right his wrongs from days gone past.
